Description of action

SloWeAre is an independent label, created in 2017 by Éloïse Moigno and Thomas Ebélé, whose mission is to authenticate the eco-responsibility of sincerely committed fashion brands. It was born out of a desire to bring more transparency and readability to consumers looking for eco-responsible clothing. Éloïse and Thomas started from the observation that there are more than a hundred labels in the fashion sector. Some focus on the raw material (organic, recycled, of animal origin, etc.), others on fair trade, the circular economy or the origin of manufacture. Each label has its own specifications and guarantees, which makes reading all the more complicated for a consumer.

To overcome these difficulties, the founders of SloWeAre have created a frame of reference that performs a complete 360° analysis of the brand's eco-responsible approach. The label also aims to help the fashion industry become sustainable and fight injustice, by inspiring, informing and supporting brands.

SloWeAre strengths:

• A holistic view. The comprehensive and cross-cutting framework adopts a predominantly qualitative approach. It takes into account the governance, mission and culture of the company, its social, environmental and economic practices, circular use, etc.

- Certifying brands. SloWeAre labels the eco-responsible approach of a brand and not only of a product, a process or a supply chain.
- A double interest. The label allows consumers to identify truly eco-responsible brands, and brands to legitimize their approach, to differentiate themselves from other less committed brands and to know on which subjects they must improve as a priority.
- A label dedicates to consumers. SloWeAre has created and animates a community, addressing everybody via its social networks, talks and events.
- A desire for popularization. Creating content with in-depth articles based on a journalistic methodology (sourcing, investigation) in order to allow readers to form their own opinion.

An anti-greenwashing methodology
SloWeAre has developed a frame of reference based on existing standards (Fundamental Conventions of the International Labor Organization, ISO 9001, ISO 26000, ISO 14001, ISO 14006). It is composed of more than 350 questions divided into 13 themes: value chain, sourcing, conception, production, distribution, circular use, eco-responsible commitments, social practices, environmental practices, economic practices, brand transparency, mission and culture of business, and governance. To be labeled, brands must provide evidence, such as their list of suppliers and components, their specifications, their charter, their CSR policy, their invoices, certificates, labels, attestations and approvals. This 360° methodological analysis makes it possible to verify the eco-responsible consistency of the brand. Some elements, such as overproduction, greenwashing, child labor or wastage, are unacceptable.
